Topics

The course consists of two modules. The first module is devoted to principles and practices of development banking; and the second covers the concepts and procedures for designing and appraisal of development projects.

Module 1- Principles and Practices of Development Banking

It is designed to provide participants with important knowledge and skills in the concepts and practices of development finance. It includes the discussion of the vital role of development financing institutions, such as development banks, in the economic and social progress of a developing country as well as its responsibilities as a financial institution. The analysis of different levels of economic development is envisioned to provide a deeper insight on the needs for development financing that could serve as guidelines for the operation of development banks. Important guidelines on long-term project finance, an important area of development banking, will also be discussed.

Module 2. Design and Appraisal of Development Projects

It is designed to provide participants with important knowledge and skills in the design and appraisal of development projects with emphasis on financial and economic for a more in-depth understanding of the concepts. It will also focus on the different aspects of an investment design and how the financial and economic aspects fit into the overall investment plan submitted by a client. In addition, the module will discuss the difference in appraisal techniques between purely private oriented investments and development projects.

Course Faculty

Composed of a select group from ADFIAP's pool of management experts from around the Asia-Pacific region as well as from the Office of International Studies and Programs of the University of Illinois, USA.

The Credential

After satisfactorily completing all the requirements of this five-day program, the participants will be given the credential of Associate in Development Banking (ADB).

Teaching Methodologies

To provide a balanced mix of theory and practice in accomplishing the objectives of the different sessions, various teaching methods will be used: lectures, discussions, exercises, case studies, workshops, sharing, integration, coaching and individual work. To maximize learning gains, the participants will be asked to analyze and render reports on case studies.
